CIVIL RIGHTS TOUR

"I refuse to accept the view that mankind is so tragically bound to the starless midnight of racism and war that the bright daybreak of peace and brotherhood can never become reality." Martin Luther King Jr.

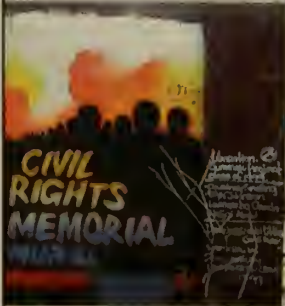

This statue in Kelly Ingram Park, located in Birmingham, Alabama, illustrates the police dog attack on children demonstrators during the 1960's.

Shane Smith and Dr. Barbara Brown Taylor examine a statue depicting a scene from the Civil Rights movement in Kelly Ingram Park.

Spring break means sun, sand, and lots of lying around... right? Not for nine Piedmont students and their professor Dr. Barbara Brown Taylor. This group set out on a six-day, five-night tour of cities significant to the Civil Rights movement.

I was lucky enough to be part of the group as it visited such cities as Atlanta, Georgia; Oxford and Tupelo, Mississippi; Montgomery, Selma and Birmingham, Alabama; and Memphis, Tennessee - but simply describing our itinerary doesn't even scratch the surface of what this trip meant to those who participated.

We met amazing people, including Billy Kyles, who was on the balcony of the Lorraine Motel with Martin Luther King during the assassination. We also met many others whose names are not as well known, but who shared their memories of the Civil Rights movement with us. The significance of the trip is not what I saw, or who I met; but what I brought back.

Before going on this trip, I knew a lot about the movement's history, but it did not feel like my history. I almost felt I had no right to celebrate events like King's birthday or the crossing of the Edmund Petus Bridge.

After all, I am a young, southern, white woman - what connection could I possibly have with King, Ralph David Abernathy, John Lewis, Rosa Parks or the countless others who were the driving force behind the Civil Rights movement?

The Civil Rights movement was not a black struggle, or an American struggle. It was, and continues to be, a universal struggle for the equality of all humanity.

The Piedmont College Theatre Department Presents

Othello

Directed By Travis Smith

"Becoming Othello"

By Aubrey Glencamp

Becoming Othello was my biggest challenge as an actor. None of my previous roles could match the physical and emotional demands that came with this role.

When I first heard that the Theatre department had Othello on the schedule for the upcoming year, I said the part would be mine. I began to prepare myself physically and emotionally about nine months before auditions.

During the summer I studied the play intensely, trying different facial expressions as I became more familiar with the script. Some people thought Othello would be too big of a challenge because of my hectic schedule and the responsibility of such a major part. But I could not wait for the opportunity to audition for the role of my lifetime. However, close to the end of the summer semester I began to suffer blackouts. Before I knew what happened I was rushed to Crawford Long Hospital in Atlanta. The next morning I was prepped for open-heart surgery.

Many people questioned whether or not I would make it back to school for the following semester. However, by the grace of God I lived to see another day and healed faster than anyone expected. After three weeks I was once again gracing the halls of Piedmont College.

After returning to school my goal was to audition for the role of Othello. I got the part. I had no idea that not only was I transforming into Othello on stage, but everything I did in my personal life became Othello as well. I began to question love, trust, honor, pride, hate and humanity as a whole.

Professor Travis Smith (director and designer) was very inspirational because even when I was frustrated with the role and myself he still believed in me. He coached me through just as an athletic coach does with his players and for that I really thank him.

Sarah Baer (Emilia) comforts Desdemona played by Annie Cason as she agonizes over Othello's rejection of her.

Ben Myers as Cassio confronts Blayne Kyle as Montano. The fight was choreographed by Blane Kyle.

Mark Trythall as Iago, the antagonist, fights with Jeremy Bishop as Roderigo.

Scenes From Shakespeare's Tragedy

Sarah Baer as Emilia challenges the integrity of her husband Iago (Mark Trythall) who has schemed and manipulated to gain power over Othello.

Jeremy Miller as Lodovico, mourns at the side of Desdemona's death bed with Emilia and a distraught Othello.

Roderigo (Jeremy Bishop) and Brabantio (David White) discuss Othello's dilemma as The Gentleman of Cyprus (Chris Flynn) listens.

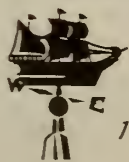

Res Shwartz, a senior theatre major, designed and constructed the costumes for Othello. Since the play she has completed an internship at the Santa Fe Opera.

The Women of Piedmont

Ashley Seale and Katie Roberts get ready for a night on the town in Panama City, Florida. Spring Break is always full of surprises: making new friends and renewing old relationships. Who knows what went on with these ladies?

Spring Break

in North Georgia is something that happens when a practically free trip to Hilton Head is cancelled at the last minute. Hope Morris and I, Darlene Wyant, were put in this unfortunate predicament a couple of days before Spring Break began. Not wanting to spend the break in a bored stupor, we decided to try to do as many activities as possible for as little money as possible. Just to make the adventure a little more interesting we had some friends write challenges for us to do throughout the week. We had them fold up the challenges and place them in an envelope and we were to open a new one every day. Then we chose our destinations. By the end of the week we had achieved our goals. In only five days we went horseback riding, picnicking at Lake Lanier, hiking, had a movie day, visited Helen, Anna Ruby Falls and the Indian Mound, and played a new form of Scrabble. All of this was done for under $40, less than we would have spent going to Hilton Head even though accommodations there were very cheap. Our friends' challenges turned out to be interesting as well. While in Helen we had to get a guy to jump on one foot while picking his nose and singing "I'm a little teapot." We were able to talk the first guy we asked into doing it! One challenge that resulted in an interesting find was that we had to get two people on film who knew what NATO stands for. We interviewed every person who walked by our picnic area at Lake Lanier and only one person knew what it stood for. Among other interesting challenges we each had to take our picture with a cow. The week might not have been a trip to the beach or a big party with a lot of friends, but for me it was even better. It was an opportunity to spend time with my best friend and have our relationship grow. At the beginning of the week we bought scrapbooks. We tried to take as many pictures as possible so we could place them in the scrapbook and make a record of our Spring Break. I guess at the beginning of the week I didn't realize that this Spring Break would be something I could never forget.

Leonardo Dreams of His Flying Machine

“ I’ve never had more requests for a song to be repeated than for Leonardo Dreams of His Flying Machine. My hope was to challenge the students to take a complex piece by this 30-year-old, green spike-haired Californian and achieve a new level of performance excellence. His pieces consist of stacks of notes, one on top of another, tone clusters and extraordinary sound images. The students created magic.”

Honors Day is held during the spring semester every year; it acknowledges graduating seniors and underclassmen who have excelled during their time at Piedmont College. Piedmont holds Honors Day in the Center for Worship and Music. All of the faculty and staff come to see who has earned the various awards from each department and to wish the seniors well in life.

I was lucky enough to receive a few awards at Honors Day including: Distinguished Business Scholar, Alpha Chi, Piedmont College Senior award, and Alpha Lambda Delta's highest graduating senior GPA award Honors Day is a great way to wrap up the school year. For me it was a time to start looking towards the future and what it holds. For seniors it is a time to step out of the college shadows and begin to experience what it's like in the real world.

We begin our new life with the broad level of knowledge provided by the education and experience we received from Piedmont College.

Art Trip NYC

Sarah Baer, Jarred Trantham, Ed Bell, Res Shwartz, Leslie Jackson, Whitney Timmons and Alex Gardner enjoy art in the city.

"Where you got those shoes?" started the scam that a somewhat obnoxious and boisterous homeless man tried to reel us in on. So he bet a couple of the guys that he could tell them what store, in what state, and at what address "they got those shoes". Needless to say the boys lost a couple of bucks. Piedmont's art department had an amazing time visiting the Big Apple. New York City never sleeps and neither did we. I, along with a handful of others, found many ways to exploit the short time we had in the city. From bar hopping to auditions to a Broadway show (oh, and throw in a few museums), we definitely had an amazing few days. Airport security adds to the ambience and excitement of New York. The trip, focusing on the huge amount of art we could view in four days, was amazing.

When I "grow up" I want to move to New York and try my hand at acting. After all, theatre is my passion and the art department lets me express myself as a photographer. I am just glad I got to be a part of a trip that took me where I want to always be.

was, of course, a nightmare. And the paranoia was almost funny. Nonetheless, flying was the way to go. Once there, we stayed in a tiny hotel off Broadway. And I mean tiny. Four of us could fit in the elevator if committed to groping each other unintentionally. All of this

Russia Trip

A TIME TO WORK

Piedmont College students spent time excavating an archeological site in the Ural region of Siberia. Here students are removing the top layer of dirt in marked off squares.

In the summer of 2003 seven Piedmont students and Dr. Al Pleysier traveled to St. Petersburg, Russia. From there they took a two-day journey by train on the Trans Siberian Railroad to an archeological site in the Ural region of Siberia. After they returned to St. Petersburg, the students spent a week touring the historic sites of the former capital city of tsarist Russia. The tours included the Winter Palace (the Hermitage), Fyodor Dostoyevsky's home, The Peterhof, Peter and Paul Fortress, the Bronze Horseman along the Neva River, and several Russian Orthodox cathedrals. In the evenings they attended the circus and the Russian Ballet. In preparation for the trip, the students completed a course on the history of Russia and the Soviet Union that was taught by the history faculty at Piedmont College.

In the afternoon, students took a break from their activities and played cards at their campsite.

STAYING WARM

In the evening students gathered around the campfire to sing songs, watch the flames and talk about their experiences that day.

THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. PETER AND ST. PAUL is located within the Peter and Paul Fortress. The cathedral houses the bodies of Peter the Great and his wife and the other Romanovs who ruled Russia. During the nineteenth and twentieth centuries the fortress was used as a prison.

WHILE TRAVELING through the Ural Mountains, students rafted down a river in rough water.

The Honors College and Canterbury Club

"The Honors College is an opportunity for special classroom experiences as well as recreational and cultural fun.

Academically gifted students are selected for honors sections of select general education classes, which means that they take a couple of classes each semester with other honors students. While these classes are not designed to be more difficult than regular sections, they're special because of the people in them, giving students an opportunity for in-depth discussion and exploration that might not be otherwise possible.

In addition, we offer a variety of outdoors activities (hikes, climbing wall, high ropes course, whitewater rafting, etc.) and cultural events (the Shakespeare Tavern, the High Museum, the Atlanta Symphony, etc.). These extra-curricular activities are often planned in conjunction with other groups (for example, the Shakespeare Tavern trips are coordinated with the Literary Society)."

A Sense of Comfort

By Jacob Marble

I've never participated before in anything like our service project at The Circle of Hope, the shelter for battered women. I've done small projects, but not like what we accomplished that day.

I was amazed at how many people were staying there or receiving some kind of support from this place.

I saw a woman in the hallway that was staying there and Tony saw her also. It was astonishing how afraid she was of us. I guess it was because we were men, but it's hard for me to comprehend how you could be that scared of someone. It really made me think how lucky I am to live in a safe household.

I used to think women were crazy for staying with someone who beat them but now I understand why they can't leave. The men won't let them leave and if they don't have a plan to survive they might have to go back making everything even worse.

I was really surprised to see how we all came together and worked so well as a team. It was comforting to me because I felt like we were all friends just trying to help someone else out when they needed it. When we were finished it gave me a great sense of pride to be able to say that I helped do what we did.

The Student Government Association is the voice of the student body. We are the liasons between the students and the administration. SGA is also the governing body of the non-academic clubs. We are responsible for voicing student concerns to the administration, providing clubs with supplemental funds, and appointing individuals to various committee around campus. We are also responsible for planning various events like homecoming.

Something new this year that I have established is the campus-wide Leadership Council.

This year we have accomplished or are establishig goals we only dreamed about four years ago. The Leadership Council is a branch off of SGA. This group meets once a month and discusses various topics on campus and we are made aware of all activities that will be going on during the year.

THE CAFETERIA

Profile of Margie Fry
by Sarah Farrell

Every morning, Monday through Friday, Margie Fry can be seen leaving her home on Pine Street "just a ways from the post office" with her husband.

For 35 years she has served breakfast and lunch to Piedmont students, faculty and staff. During those years, Fry has seen many students come and go, and though she misses the old faces, getting to know the next class of students is something she loves.

As the mother of six children, three boys and three girls, Fry knows what it takes to cook for a large number of people. Food is essential to life, but when you are in college, a meal needs to be an unwinding, enjoyable experience. When each day pulses with deadlines, homework and demanding professors, mealtime can become an anticipated ritual.

We all have things in our life we get used to, from the way our sandwiches are cut to the amount of sprinkles we put on our ice cream to the familiar face of a best friend, and for Piedmont students, somewhere in the middle of all that is Fry giving us ample portions of eggs and bacon to complement her "good morning" smile.

She has lived in the area most of her life and one of her granddaughters attended Piedmont.

Mary Fry graduated in 1993 with a degree in early childhood education. Mary never saw her grandmother in the cafeteria though. If she was not in class, she was working, proving to be just as dedicated as her grandmother.

According to Fry, young adults are not ruder today than they were 35 years ago. They are just hungrier. Interestingly enough, men and women are eating more salads. In addition to cooking breakfast, Fry is also in charge of the salad bar. And she is very proud of her salad bar.

Young people are just as polite as they were when she first started working here; only certain areas of fashion have changed drastically.

Normal dress for a man was a suit and tie; women wore hose and heels. Pajamas were worn only where they are meant to be worn and bra straps were not considered a displayable accessory. Fry just laughs at all of this and points out that young people will do as they please and no harm is meant by it.

Her day at Piedmont ends after lunch and her husband is always on time to pick her up. She admits to making him wait every now and then while she talks. When she is through, Fry joins her husband and they go home.

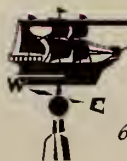

Fry has never learned how to drive.

Letter From President W. Ray Cleere

When graduates return to Piedmont during homecoming or Alumni Weekend each year, they are always interested in seeing the new buildings and comparing the campus of today with the campus that they remember. Frequently I'll hear snatches of conversation that start off with "I remember when that building went up," or "We were the first ones to hold classes in that hall." For those of you who are students this year, you'll have plenty to talk about when your own reunion time rolls around. (And it will come sooner than you think!)

Piedmont this year is undergoing a mini building boom, with construction or renovation of several major buildings underway as I write this. At the start of the fall semester, the college opened a new wing for the Center for Worship and Music. In addition to classrooms and practice rooms for the music department, the wing includes Brooks Hall, a recital and practice room for the college's music ensembles.

In early 2003 Piedmont also rededicated the chapel in the Center for Worship and Music. The centerpiece of the building's complete renovation includes the installation of the Sewell Pipe Organ, built by Cosovont Frères of Montreal. With more than 3,600 pipes and a mechanical-action keyboard, the organ provides our music students access to one of the premier organs in the Southeast. World-renowned performers have also treated the community's music lovers to a series of organ concerts.

The Center for Worship and Music is now home to Covenant Congregational Church, which was organized by the college chaplain, the Rev. Ashley Cook, in 2003. The church is growing into a vibrant part of the northeast Georgia community and also serves as a teaching church for students interested in the ministry or church music.

Two major construction projects also got under way on campus in the fall. Work began on Moyflower Hall, a 60-student resident hall, the third new dorm to open in five years. The hall is located next to the Johnny Mize Athletic Center and Baseball Museum, which opened in 2001. Also near the Mize Center, construction is under way on the Loudermilk Baseball Complex, which will feature a 1930's style baseball stadium and indoor practice facilities.

Two other projects completed this year will be the renovation of the Nelms House as the new President's Home and the landscaping of Chapel Alley to provide a beautiful entrance to the north campus. I hope that when you return to campus one day (soon!) you'll look at these additions and proudly tell your friends, "I was here when they built that!"

Piedmont Mourns Tragic Loss

Graduate Student David Ashton Boorn

A two-car collision claimed the lives of two members of the Piedmont family on February 11, 2004 and seriously injured another graduate of Piedmont.

Graduate student David Ashton Boorn and former nursing student Tetyana "Sasha" Aguirre were killed when their vehicles were involved in a head-on collision. Tetyana's daughter, Oleksandra Yakymenko, also a graduate of Piedmont, was seriously injured in the accident that took place on the Highway 105 bridge outside of Demorest.

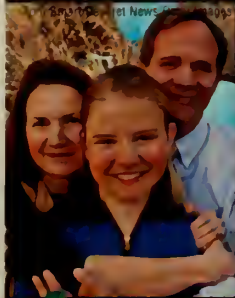

Ashton received his undergraduate degree in 2000 and was scheduled to graduate in May with a master's degree in secondary education. Tetyana was a nursing student at Piedmont who went on to study medicine. She had been a physician in the Ukraine. Oleksandra graduated in 2003 with a degree in music and was studying at a conservatory in the Ukraine. At the time of the accident, she was visiting her mother in the United States.
